

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Table of figures	xiii
Chapter one
The grounding	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Work and its value in society	1
1.2.1 Segmentation of work versus gender roles	3
1.2.2 Complementarity within the Akan household in Ghana	5
1.2.2.1 The political and religious roles of Akan women in complementarity	6
1.3 Household in perspective	8
1.3.1 Why the household?	12
1.3.2 Household functions	15
1.3.3 The household as a decision-making unit	19
1.3.4 Economic change and the household	20
1.3.5 The impact of work on women roles in the household	21
1.3.6 Income distribution and power in the household	21
1.4 Giving and receiving in economic activities	23
1.4.1 Gift and reciprocity in some cultures in Ghana	26
1.4.2 Reciprocity in vocational training set-ups	28
1.4.3 Reciprocity and solidarity in Ghana	29
1.4.4 Giving and receiving as basic principles of relationships in most cultures in Ghana	31
1.4.5 The effects of reciprocity on income generating activities	34
1.5 Square pegs in round holes	35
1.6 Women empowerment strategies in Ghana – the historical perspective	38
1.7 Ecology, economy, and culture	44

1.8 Situating the research in context	47
1.9 Conceptual frameworks	50
Chapter two
Methodology	57
2.1 Introduction	57
2.2 The journey back home	59
2.3 The location of the research area	62
2.3.1 Elmina	63
2.3.2 Teteman-Buem	65
2.4 Research instruments and validity	69
2.5 Sampling	70
2.6 Participant observation	72
2.7 Interviews	76
2.8 Field data analysis	78
2.9 Ethical considerations	80
2.10 Chapter summary	82
Chapter three
Gender and change: Beyond the weaker vessel's view	83
3.1 Introduction	83
3.2 Urban participants	86
3.2.1 Aunty Ceci: Working the oil in Elmina Urban Centre	86
3.2.2 Kwansima: The moving bank (susu collector) in Elmina Urban Centre	91
3.2.3 Mamunatu: The waakye seller in Elmina Urban Centre	96
3.2.4 Aunty Mansa: The baker ('Paano dan mu') in Elmina Urban Centre	99
3.2.5 Serwaa: The Fante kenkey seller in Elmina Urban Centre	102
3.2.6 Mansima: The fishing bay service provider in Elmina Urban Centre (working at 'Interberton')	107
3.2.7 Badu: The provision store seller in Elmina Urban Centre	111

3.3 Rural setting	113
3.3.1 Owusuwaa: The hairdresser	113
3.3.2 Dzifa: The mashed kenkey seller	117
3.3.3 Elinor: The food vendor	121
3.3.4 Salamatu: The kooko seller	124
3.3.5 Mawunya: The egg seller	128
3.3.6 Adjo: The provision store seller	130
3.3.7 Dada Afua: The freelance trader and cocoa farmer	132
3.4 Comparison of the women across urban and rural areas of study	135
3.5 Decision-making in households: Between women's money and social structure	141
3.6 Changing roles in households: An overlap in gender roles	153
3.7 Economic activities of women, blessing or curse?	159
3.8 Chapter summary	164
Chapter four
Between homo economicus and homo sociologicus: Exploring the moral and ritual economy of female gender's income generating activities	167
4.1 Introduction	167
4.2 Socialization and enculturation	168
4.3 Reciprocity and trust	179
4.4 The ritual economy of funerals and women's income generating activities	193
4.5 Chapter summary	201
Chapter five
Women's income generating activities: Constraints and perceived interventions	203
5.1 Introduction	203
5.2 Health constrains	203
5.2.1 Smoke	204
5.2.2 Heat and fire	206
5.3 Constrain of heavy loads and body pains	211

5.4	Constrain of waste disposal	214
5.5	Non-use of protective uniforms and gadgets	216
5.6	Economic and infrastructural constrains	217
5.6.1	Start-up capital	218
5.6.2	Weak institutions	219
5.6.3	Bad debt	220
5.6.4	Lack of basic amenities	221
5.7	Socio-cultural constraints	222
5.7.1	Compromising motherly roles in the household	222
5.8	Perceived interventions	224
5.8.1	Information and occupational hazard and solutions	224
5.8.2	Water, sanitation, and hygiene practices	226
5.9	Chapter summary	227
Chapter six
	Conclusion	229
6.1	Introduction	229
6.2	Main arguments based on my findings	230
6.2.1	Agency and autonomy	230
6.2.2	Culture and economy	232
6.2.3	Economy and social and psychological issues	233
6.3	Contribution to the field of economic anthropology	235
6.4	Contribution to policy and affirmative actions in Ghana	237
6.4.1	Gender	239
6.4.2	Education, skills, and economy	239
6.4.3	Economic structures and saving mode	240
6.5	Research design and the idea of comparison	241
	References	245